Hi

I am wondering if you can help me - I am looking for a Hillman Imp to buy. I have rebuilt one about 30 years ago which my wife drove to and from work for several years. Now I am thinking I would like to do another one up or buy one in going condition. Do you know of anyone who may have one they want to sell. Have looked on the internet but there isn't any around. Hope to hear from you.

Cheers

Bill Rowland

Hi,

The Retroautos July 2020 mid-month column is now online. Click on this LINK.

The story showcases the 1955 Dodge “La Femme”. This was Chrysler’s attempt to appeal to the female driver of the mid 1950's.

As always, Retroautos is published with passion and with pride.

Cheers...David

Humour Follows

Hillary Clinton goes to a gifted-student primary school in New York to talk about the world. After her talk she offers question time.

One little boy puts up his hand. Hillary asks him what his name is. "Kenneth," he says.

"And what is your question, Kenneth?" she asks.

"I have three questions," he says.

"First -- whatever happened in Benghazi?"

"Second -- why would you run for president if you are not capable of handling two e-mail accounts?"

"And, third -- whatever happened to the missing six billion dollars while you were Secretary of State?"

Just then the bell rings for recess. Hillary informs the kiddies that they will continue after recess.

When they resume Hillary says, "Okay, where were we? Oh, that's right, question time.

Who has a question?"

A different boy -- little Johnny -- puts his hand up.

Hillary points to him and asks him what his name is.

"Johnny," he says.

"And what is your question, Johnny?" she asks.

"I have five questions," he says.

"First -- whatever happened in Benghazi?"

"Second -- why would you run for president if you are not capable of handling two e-mail accounts?"

"Third -- whatever happened to the missing six billion dollars while you were Secretary of State?"

"Fourth -- why did the recess bell go off 20 minutes early?"

"And, fifth -- where's Kenneth?"

Urine Test for Old Men

My urologist's office called the other day and explained that my scheduled appointment would now be done over the phone due to the coronavirus. One hour before the scheduled teleconference, I was instructed (via email) to administer my own urine test. This was to avoid those lab tests and costly co-pays that your doctor's tell you to get at Quest Diagnostics, and because they're shutdown too.

Directions:

Simply go outside and pee on the front lawn.

If ant's gather: DIABETES.

If you pee on your feet: PROSTATE.

If it smells like a barbecue: CHOLESTEROL.

If your wrist hurts when you shake it: OSTEOARTHRITIS.

If you return to your house with your penis outside your pants:

ALZHEIMER'S.

HAVE A NICE DAY!

The 8 Most Common Scams On the Internet

The computer revolution, like all revolutions, has brought as much bad as it has good, but it's here to stay. Therefore, as painful as it may be, it's necessary to wise up to the fact that many nefarious people are using the internet to con you. So here are 25 of the most common internet scams, designed to fool you into handing over your money or private details.

Fortunately, simply being aware of these scams, and the modus operandi of these modern criminals is enough to fortify and protect yourself from them.

1. The Nigerian con - This is a very common scam. You receive an email saying a rich Nigerian nobleman has died, or perhaps a foreigner with no heirs has died here, and all you need to do is help the emailer by letting them move the money to your account for safekeeping. For this you will be handsomely rewarded, they say. At some point, the emailer will ask you for money, for bank fees or something like that. Don't reply to any email that promises you money.
2. The natural disaster scam - Some scammers take advantage of high profile disasters they have seen on the news. They will often set up a fake website, or email you with a request for a charitable donation to the cause, pulling on your heartstrings. Always check to see if the charity is real. Don't take their word for it.
3. The 'your friends were robbed' scam - Frequently people have received messages from friends' email addresses saying they have been robbed. The friend asks for money because they are all alone in a strange country with nothing. The email account has been hacked by malware, though. If you send any money it won't be going to your friend. Ask your friend to call you so you can hear their voice.
4. The 'please click on this greeting card' scam - During the holiday season, some scammers post fake greeting cards all over the internet, but not with a spirit of goodwill. If you click on the link it will tell you to update your media player. This update is actually a virus. Don't accept software updates from emails.
5. The Craigslist scam - A common scam used on popular website Craigslist involves a buyer offering you triple the price of the item you put up for sale. They send you a check and ask you to use it to cover the delivery costs on your end. Unfortunately, after you send the item, the check bounces and you are left with nothing.
6. You have been pre-approved - Click here for your credit card! - The word pre-approved should send alarm bells ringing. But if not, you need to know that this scam will ask you to pay an annual fee upfront. Then you will never hear from the credit card company again.
7. An email ransom - So much information about many of us is available online, particularly through social media. Therefore someone with a cold heart can use this information to write you a ransom email, claiming your relative has been kidnapped, and you will only see them again if you pay up. This, unfortunately, does happen, but almost always, it is a barefaced lie. You should call your relative to make sure they are fine, to put your mind at ease.

8. Take our survey - A lot of surveys on the internet are genuine marketing tools. Some, however, are designed in order to steal your internet passwords, bank details, and internet history. Watch out for this. If you don't want to take a survey, try to close the window on your browser.
